Dear Sirs,

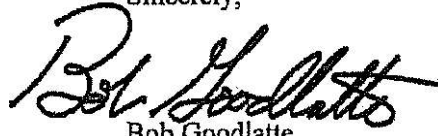

I am writing to express concern over the capital requirements recently proposed by your agencies. Since this proposal was released in June, I have heard from numerous community banks throughout my district, and I have concerns that the capital requirements would significantly hurt these institutions.

It appears that the current proposal for the Basel III capital requirements would institute a "one-size-fits-all" approach to capital standards that would disproportionately affect community banks. Additionally, banks in my district have expressed concern that the complexity of the capital requirements will impose significant costs associated with collecting and reporting the required information to comply with the proposed rules. Community banks have more limited resources in light of recent regulatory changes and they will be hard-pressed to transition to these capital standards without eliminating key portions of their business that serve their communities.

Community banks serve a unique and a vital role to the communities in Virginia that they serve. As our economy struggles to recover, we must ensure that regulations do not hinder the ability for community banks to provide the capital and the credit that is necessary to aid economic revitalization throughout Virginia. While sufficient capital requirements are essential to a strong banking and financial system, they should be appropriately tailored to take into account the intricacies of the community banking model.

I hope that you will consider the potential negative affect the Basel III proposal will have on community banks, and revise your proposal. I appreciate your attention to this request. I look forward to hearing from you about this issue.

Sincerely,
